Mediators who volunteer their time and service with NCRC will soon see an upsurge in Juvenile Offender mediation referrals from the Juvenile Court. In light of this, additional and targeted training on the hows, whens, and whys of mediating with kids (and sometimes their families) is necessary. This workshop will include theoretical and practical coverage of key points of juvenile and family law; child and adolescent cognitive development and communication patterns; and mediation skills needed to work with kids whose conflicts may involve domestic violence, sexuality, and drug use.
